

Visa for Airport Transit

GENERAL INFORMATION

Airport transit is the exclusive stay in the international transit zone of an airport. A transit stay is only considered to be airport transit when, during a transit journey, you transfer at a single airport in any of the Schengen countries and do not change terminals at the airport.

The vast majority of foreign travelers benefit from the “transit privilege”. This means that if they do not leave the International Airport Area during a stopover at a German airport and the destination is not a Schengen country, they do not need a transit visa.

Nationals of the following countries do not have the transit privilege and therefore require an airport transit visa (category A) for transit at a German airport:

- Afghanistan
- Bangladesh
- Democratic Republic of the Congo
- Eritrea
- Ethiopia
- Ghana
- India
- Iran
- Iraq
- Jordan *
- Lebanon
- Mali
- Nigeria
- Pakistan
- Somalia
- South Sudan
- Sri Lanka
- Sudan
- Syria
- Turkey *

* Certain exceptions apply to these countries.
